WOMEN PROTEST CODE NAPOLEON 'AT PARIS PARLEY

International Women's Suffrage Alliance Continues Labors in French Capital

SENATE RECEIVES SEVERAL DELEGATES

Mrs. Corbett Ashby of England Is Only Nominee for the Presidency of Alliance

> By MARJORIE SHULER By Special Cable

PARIS, June 3—With an appeal to the French Senate to give the suffrage to French women and a protest to the entire French nation against the Code Napoleon, the International Women's Suffrage Alliance interrupted its triennial convention for a day at Fontainebleau. German, Japanese, Egyptian, Indian, Scandinavian and other women of the 40 countries represented built up international triendships in the old Juste rendezvous at the Chateaux, had luncheon in the Palace, and were received by the Municipality of Fontainebleau. A day in the castle so intimately connected, with Napoleonic history followed an evening meeting devoted to protest the Code Napoleon, the basis of the civil laws of the Latin countries.

With Mme. Suzanne Grinberg,

Senate Receives Delegates A dozen women members of Par-diament were received by the French Senate to present the Congress's res-clution calling upon all governments and parliaments to give this measure of justice and equality, which had proved beneficial in every country which had already extended votes to which had already extended votes to women.

One entire session of the congress was given ever to the discussion by unenfranchised women of various methods to gain the vote. Because a large number of countries had already given the vote and the women there were working in good citizenship, the organization in the future will be known as the International Alliance for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship. A proposal of Belgium to change the object of the silliance to change the object of the silliance of the family and the community permits. Inid on the table, on a technical objection, was received too late for consideration after it had been labeled by Mrs. Elizabeth Abbott England, as "reactionary."

Board's Number Increased

The Congress voted to permit the payment of dues by countries with depreciated exchange on a sliding has international board from 11 to 21, which will choose seven of its members to act as an exceptive committee.

workers.

"It the work is actually dangerous, no human being should undertake it," stated Miss Frances Sterling, England, to which Miss Mundt replied that the ideal was too sweeping, but a start could be made by protecting women and children.

Nominee for President

Mrs. Corbett Ashby is the only nominee for president and will again head the Alliance: Resolutions contemning the industrial conventions framed at Washington and Geneva in 1916 and 1921 to protect women industrial workers, and a resolution ralling for future labor regulations to be based on occupation instead of sex were sent back to the committee for re-wording. The resolution could be called up again, said Mrs. Corbett Lamby, "if time permitted," but Miss.

MORE watermelons are exbefore known in the United States except once. The Government Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported today that the peak of movement will be reached within the next few weeks. Biggest increases are looked for from Georgia, 25 per cent as compared with last year. Down in Texas, a state which takes rank second only to Georgia as the champion water-melon producer, the eastern sec-tions may double the 1925 output. Apparently a ripe red watermelon crop having a farm value of more than $12,000,000 is in sight.

DEMAND VOICED FOR REDUCTION IN LOCAL TAXES

$15,000,000 Annual Increase in State Leads to Study of Ways to Economy,

GENERAL REVISION OF LEVIES PROPOSED

Chamber of Commerce Report Urges Survey to Eliminate Unnecessary Activities

Believing that the average citizen's tax bill to his state and municipality can and should be reduced as federal levies have been reduced, a study of Massachusetts revenue laws, already begun by the taxpayers' conference committee of the State Chamber of Commerce, will be pursued by several independent groups before the next session of the Legislature, and it is expected that recommendations will be submitted to redraft completely the present tax statutes.

The time has come, many officials from their abnormal wartime level. Municipal taxes, contrary to the tendency in state and federal systems are growing in Massachusetts by $15,000,000 a year.

Authorities contend that there are many possibilities of economy in municipalities, particularly through a more equitable distribution of the burden among all taxable properties and persons. Others believe that state taxes may be more fairly drawn to reduce present exemptions large sources, in order that the whole tax may be lower. The consensus seems to be that the time is ripe for a widespread study of the entire tax field.

Studying Ways and Means

Revision of the tax laws, it is be-lieved, will hold much the same place in the 1927 legislative session that revision of criminal law held in Chamber of Commerce are now studying ways and means of carrying on the extensive studies of municipal taxes recommended to them by an expert committee under the direction of Philip Nichols, Boston taxation authority.

Governor Fuller has announced his intention of appointing a com-mission to survey the entire field, with particular attention to the revision of income taxes, so that they will conform more nearly to the reduction in the federal income levies.

Henry F. Long, Massachusetts Commissioner of Taxation, carries on every year what amounts to an investigation of present laws, and makes lengthy recommendations to the Legislature. This year one of his proposals which became law will bring millions of dollars additional to the Commonwealth annually through a revised inheritance tax. the Division of Accounts, will continue his work of installing auditing

Revision of Income Taxes

Erland F. Fish, state Senator from Brookline, chairman of the Committee on Taxation, is anxious to start a revision of income taxes, and John W. Haigis, Senator from Greenfield introduced a resolve to this effect this year, but it came so late in the session that favorable action was not possible. Alexander Holmes, deputy commissioner in charge of income taxes in the state department, drafted a 50-page bill this session to remitted to the Legislature.

Pending the report of a sion to be chosen by the Governor, the state chamber is the most authoritative work, since it is proposed by recognized experts who have studied the problem specifically for a year.

The Imperial Council made several changes in its by-laws today. Future petitions for Shrine temples must bear 1000 signatures, and temples already chartered will lose their minimum under which the community can obtain needed service and improvements the report explains.

The greater part of the sums expended by municipalities each year, it is recorded, is appropriated in compliance with the specific requirements of state statutes. It, is time, the report urges, that these statutes should be critically examined, in order to determine whether the need for some of their requirements has passed, or whether the money ex-pended for the purposes specified in these statutes could be applied to more useful object.

Similarly, the committee believe that expenses incurred under per-mission of state statutes should be

A most important phase of the work of economy lies in extending and strengthening the budget system, the report says. Statutory limitations orrowing, the installation in so far as is possible of a pay-as-you-go policy, and the assessment as in other states of greater land damages and betterments, are suggested as pos-sible methods of economy.

Tax Limit Return Debated At one time Massachusetts municipalities were restricted by a statutory tax limit on current appropriations, but this applies to Boston only at present. The committee advises the possibility of a return to the former system. When a city or town in Massachusetts desires to borrow a large sum, it petitions the Legislature for authority to borrow "outside the debt limit," until many communities owe more outside what was supposed to be an inflexible debt limit than they owe inside. The committee recommends study of the possibility of set-ting up a less flexible limit.

to the fact that taxes are not collected until October or November, municipalities have to borrow in anticipation of taxes. They have to pay considerable interest charges on such sums, and the committee urges that the possibility of collecting part of the current taxes earlier in the year be investigated.

On the other hand, Britain is will-Pasha Yeghen or Sarwat Pasha, in the Premiership. Both Adley and Sarwat, however, are unwilling to undertake the responsibility on the ground that they would be in the position of having to pay the piper while Zaghlul danced.

Meanwhile it is pointed out here that the British declaration in 1922, giving Egypt conditional independence is not a unilateral undertaking, but implies loyal co-operation in Egypt. In the absence of this cooperation, Britain might find itself obligated to revise its declaration.
This, however, would be an extreme measure which is not contemplated

'GAS' PRICE RISE INQUIRY SOUGHT

Virginia Governor Cites Widespread Increases-—Questions Mergers

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, June 3-Coincident with a demand for an investigation into the rising price of gasoline made by Harry F. Byrd. Governor of Virginia, in a letter to President Coolidge, comes the announce ment of the Bureau of Mines that crude petroleum production is speeding up in the United States due to the "prospect of price increase." The bureau's figures show a 2 per cent increase in petroleum production in April as compared with March, while in the former month gasoline production "broke all records" with 23,

515,000 barrels produced. Governor Byrd asks an immediate start of a nonpolitical fact-finding investigation by the Federal Trade Commission. He charges that the people of the United States have been forced to stand, within four months, which aggregated approximately $500,000,000 annually. The additional burden of the gasoline increase amounts to $300,000,000 annually, he

The gasoline price has risen in Virginia 4 cents a gallon since Feb. 12, Governor Byrd states, entailing an added burden to the State of $6,000,000. He says simultaneous advances in price throughout the United States are almost certain indications of prearranged price fixing. He also urges investigation into recent mergers in the industry. Great Bronze Cranes For the Gardens

Japanese garden ornaments, like Japanese gardens, are things of imagination and poetic charm, often mingled with a note of whimsical humor that is utterly irresistible. No one, we think, could see one of these tall cranes . . . which the Far East Shop has just received from Japan . . . its webbed feet spread, and its long neck stretched in some droll and marvelously naturalistic attitude, without longing to make it at home at the edge of a lotus or lily pool or beside a curve of iris-bordered stream. Two would make a delightful pair for a fountain, one leaning over, the other with its head lifted and long beak parted to catch a fly or gnat. Large cranes . . . those with lifted head are about five feet high . . . $100. Smaller ones, $35.

Snow Lanterns

Granite lanterns with wide-spreading roofs are called by the Japanese "snow-scene" lanterns, because of the charming way they take the snow in winter. They are picturesque ornaments for a garden at any season, however, and long exposure can only mellow the gray stone to greater beauty and give it a precious patina of lichen or moss. They stand on four short legs, and in Japan are generally placed near water, among shrubs and rocks. $85. Fourth Gallery, New Building

Shorter Working Week

The workers declared in favor of the demand of Arthur Pugh, chairman of the British Trade Union Council, for more humane conditions and relaxation which the shorter working day and week are intended to provide. "The Washington conrention is as necessary," he added, for the protection of the good employer as for the workpeople, and is but an act of social justice. For this and other reasons, this protest ought not to come from the workers' alone. However, if the worker are to have faith in construcive, constitutional procedure for adusting their working conditions, it they are to adopt the methods of rea-soned discussions and negotiations rather than strikes and revolt, if we are to inspire their confidence in this great international organization, then we must make certain that without any equivocation the bond is honored and the contract fulfilled."

There are among the casts in the modeling class some fine reproductions of masterpieces. In the same room there are shown charcoal drawings that do not seem as standardized as the average drawing that one sees in the course of one's visit to the schools. Training in charcoal is long and arduous for the one that is eager to know the craft of drawing and painting, and it is a satisfaction to ee the thoroughness with which it is taught in Boston's schools.

Drawing from dusty casts is a dry enough performance figuratively and actually, but one finds many of the students here doing the job with zest and achieving first class results, as of a Gothic Figure. In some of the exhibits such as the one by Luther Gnalian, the Armenian one by Luther Gnahan, the Armenian prize winner, there is more than good craftsmanship, for the man has been able in an astonishingly brief period to do some imaginative work, and finish compositions that have the merit and significance of fine bjects of art. His drawings are particularly distinctive in their expression of movement, the suppleness of $10,000 at once for grading even form, the grace of youth. Scott Carbee School

Another school that holds forth in this exhibiting season is that of Scott Carbee on the corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Boylston Street. In one large room there are displayed portraits in oils, crayons and charcoal. They are hung very closely together and from the mass one may get a good idea of the intensity of course that Mr. Carbee offers to his students. The portraits give attention primarily to the qualities that emphasize the modeling, that graduate the planes into one an-other. There is vitality expressed through the careful manipulation of this scheme. There is a discerning consistency in the distribution of tones in the choice of colors.

BRITISH SURVEY COVERS SCHOOLS

Teachers Inspect American and Colonial Systems in Unification Effort

In a tour of inspection of Amerian school systems Miss Florence Bamford and Miss Agnes Ireland, two British school teachers now visiting in Boston, declare they have found much of value to carry back with them to their own country for the improvement of the schools there. They had a conference this afternoon with Dr. Jeremiah E. Burke, superintendent of Boston's public schools, regarding the work as carried on in Boston

Miss Bamford and Miss Ireland are members of a group of 70 British teachers who are making a two-year English-speaking countries with the aim of eventually working out a closer unification of systems and standards among the nations of the British Empire and therefore a closer unification of the people.

Miss Bamford comes from Huddlesfield in Yorkshire and Miss Ireland from the London County Council. They have already visited Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada, where they lectured, taught

In every one of those colonies they found the people wide awake and alert in regard to education and eager to adopt and put into operation the best that could be found. Their tendencies were invariably progressive.

Probably as the result of an awak-ening caused by the World War, which revealed the underlying unity, of men at the same time that it showed up the falsities of a narrow nationalism, history is no longer taught in a provincial way that is chiefly military, they stated.

Instead it has an economic and social basis swinging cut over the entire Empire and including the whole world. Local history is not neglected, however, every reasonable effort being made, especially in Australia and New Zealand, to acquaint the children with their own clony and elicit their appreciation and keye for it. Vocational education is receiving a great deal of attention everywhere, they report.

Each state controls its own educational system, Miss Bamford said, and is well organized. They train their own teachers and are giving special attention at this time to the development of junior high schools.

More Closely Knit by War Miss Bamford and Miss Ireland found that the colonies had been more closely knit to the mother country as a result of their experiences together during the war, both colonies and mother country coming to see the real values in each other, and their common ideals and like-nesses, though oceans separated them and backgrounds and environ-ments seemed almost totally different. People in the colonies warmly welcomed the visitors from England, cordially co-operated with them and seemed to appreciate the underlying purpose of the League of the Empire, an organization which is an outgrowth of the war, under whose auspices the teachers are making their study, evidently realizing that it is for the advantage of all to have educational systems that are basically alike and co-operative, although independent, each of the other, and ditions and needs.

The two teachers believe that the

By a Staff Correspondent

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 3-A nation-wide campaign against objectionable motion pictures will be one of the major activities of the General Federation of Women's Clubs during the next two years, according to Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president.

The federation will work through Its local clubs to enlist the public In the campaign for clean films, and its members will be warned against allying themselves with the industry, or allowing their organizations to be used for advertising purposes.

"This is one of the foremost probdems facing the federation," declared Mrs. Sherman. "We must not allow ourselves to be drawn into alliances with the motion picture industry which would hamper our independnce of action, and we can co-oper ate with film producers only when they have shown a willingness to withdraw objectionable pictures."

Co-operation Where Possible Mrs. Alfred Tyler of Chicago, chairman of the motion pictures committee of the applied education department, is also wary of "entan-gling alliances" with the motion picture industry, but believes club women should be willing to co-operate whenever possible. Constructive suggestions are as valuable in film eform as destructive criticism, according to Mrs. Tyler.

The campaign for purification of the motion pictures has for its main object to make bad films unprofitable, according to Mrs. Sherman.

The federation's work in this line considered so important that Mrs. Tyler's committee may be made an independent committee responsible only to the president, it was stated. Planting of Trees

Trees planted by women's clubs line highways and cast their grateful roadside shadows in every state, from Maine to California, according to the report of Miss Vida Newthe federation's committee on highway and memorial tree planting. The committee program emphasizes the planting of "home and community Christmas trees" and roadside planting for beautification of highways.

The aim of the committee work, Miss Newsom said, is 3,000,000 trees planted by 3,000,000 clubwomen, and every club in the federation registered 100 per cent in the American Tree Association. Clubs in 32 states have reported definite achievements in highway and memorial tree plant-

"Women for World Peace" may seem a simple enough title for the session of the convention on Saturday evening but to one familiar with the history of the organization it is the culmination of a series of interesting events, many of them hitherto unpublished.

The will for internationalism was strong when the group of suffragists met in Washington in 1902 to consider the formation of the organization leading Dr. Anna Howard Shaw to say then: "In the realm of heart, in the domain of mind there are no geographical lines dividing the nations. You come to us as members of one family. You come that we may all stand on one plane of freedom." The inter-responsibilities of the vomen of one nation for the women of other nations were emphasized during the years when suffrage victories were coming slowly, first in country and then in another, trooped into the conventions like graduates to receive diplomas from the hands of the president, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. Always she charged them to use their votes so that they would make it easier for the women of other countries to internationalism purified of personalities and ambitions, filled with sis-terly sympathy, faith in womanhood, exultant hope so impelling that it will bring the women of all lands to

Proof that the conference did help was offered at the next convention in Rome in 1923, when with daily reports of further French advances into the Ruhr a second conference was arranged between the two groups of women, whose intense of common understanding to pro tect their common interests. No blind sentiment impelled the women in these conferences, as the German women found when they appealed to the Swedish members of the Alliance to make it clear that Germany could not pay cattle in kind, according to the terms of the reparations. And the Swedish women replied in effect: "So long as the German Army drove cattle out of the allied countries without regard to the women and children there, you canand when the groups of new voters not expect much sympathy from the rest of the world when you talk now of hardships to your women and children."

Then there was the proposal of the Australian women at a time when the number of British votes in the League of Nations was being win, "to grow closer, to develop lofty urged most strongly as an argument against the League.

"Always the Alliance has given the various countries in the British Empire with national suffrage organizations the same representation of votes accorded to any other individual country," said the Australians "But we are willing to sacrifice our votes, and we ask there-fore that the entire British Empire hereafter be given only as many votes as any one other country in the Alliance

The desire for self-effacement in the interests of justice was suffi-cient and the Alliance declined to accept the proposal.

This and farm relief appear to be the major barriers to the desire of many members who are up for re-election to get home to take personal charge of their compassions.

Opponents of the agreement fought it vigorously during the two days it was before the House, but they conceded from the beginning that they had little or no chance to defeat ratification or block action. Under Senate rules, the opposition has more latitude for a protracted contest.

As in the House, the opponents are expected to base their objections of the liberality of the terms, which spread the payments over 62 years in annual installments, graduating upward from $30,000,000 until the full amount, which includes interest,

Proponents of ratification hold that the agreement accurately reflects France's capacity to pay, while op-ponents contend that this is not the case and that it is unfair to American taxpayers, because the United States, in borrowing the funds advanced to France, agreed to pay 41/4 per cent interest on most of the principal, whereas the settlement pro-vides for a much lower rate.

News of Ratification Brings Satisfaction to Paris

By Special Cable , PARIS, June 3-The Com of Foreign Affairs of the Chamber has decided to ask the Government to give it an opportunity without de-lay of considering conjointly with the Finance Commission the problem of interallied debts, and especially the accord concluded by Henry Berenger, French Ambassador to the United States in Washington. No date at which the commissions are likely to bring their report on this subject before the Chamber can be fore-shadowed. Doubtless, if the Government responds favorably to the present request, then the commissions ork quickly.

Yet there is only a short time before a long vacation and it seems somewhat doubtful whether the Gov-

HARVARD CREW COACH RESIGNS

Lack of Co-operation Given as Reason for Stevens' Withdrawal

With the Harvard University crews leaving for Red Top, Conn., Sunday, three weeks before meeting Yale University in the annual race on the Thames River, Edward A. Stevens, head coach of the varsity and junior varsity eights for three years, has resigned. Herbert H. Haines, coach of the freshman crew, will take charge for the remainder of the time and no others will be added to the staff.

The resignation of Coach Stevens came as a complete surprise to all those excepting the crews and advisory rowing committee. The reason of his sudden departure is believed to rest upon the varsity eight. The seniors on the crew are said to have asserted a lack of confidence in Coach Stevens and the latter immediately sent the following statement to Athletic Director William J. Bincham: and the latter immediately sent the following statement to Athletic Director William J. Bingham:
"In view of the lack of co-operation on the part of the crew it seems highly undesirable that I should attempt to continue in my present nesttion of head ntinue in my present position of head ach after this date. Much as I regret nothing but harm can result where entire confidence does not exist on the part of both oarsmen and coach." Director Bingham, in reply, sent the following letter of acceptance:

"Recognizing that conditions as they relate to the varsity crews are as they are described in your letter of June 2, the committee on the regulation of the athletic sports has decided with regret athletic sports has decided with regret to accept your resignation."

Capt. Robert Winthrop '26, stroke of the varsity eight, made the following comment on the matter:
"During the three years that Coach Stevens has been here, he has given rowing at Harvard a tremendous impetus by popularizing the sport among undergraduates. Realizing, however, that there was a lack of co-operation between the various crews, and a lack that there was a lack of co-operation between the various crews, and a lack of unity and leadership in the coaching system, we felt that an immediate change was imperative. In Bert Haines I am sure the crew will have the utmost confidence. The new regime should carry on the best traditions of Harvard rowing."

pitious than yesterday. Although a trifle cooler and with a slight northeast wind, it promised to warm up with the heightening of the sun and thus afford most favorable conditions for the Americans in their efforts to score their fourth triumph in this series of international team contests.

Jones and Gunn made the best

Jones and Gunn made the best showings, piling up the overwhelming lead of nine holes each over Cyril J. H. Tolley, former British champion, and the Hon. W. G. Brownlow, the Irish star, in their matches.

Jess W. Sweetser, after being held all square by Sir Ernest W. E. Holderness for the first nine, achieved a lead of 2 up at the end of the morning round. George von Elm of Los Angeles was 4 up on Maj. C. O. Hezlet, while Jesse P. Guilford led Robert Harris, one of the British mainstays, by one hole.

Arthur Jamieson Jr., had Robert A.

In the past most expeditions to the polar regions have had to undergo long periods of complete isolation from the outside world, since it has of communicating with civilization, for carrying spares. In the present instance, however, arrangements were made whereby the Marconi Company equipped the air-ship with special transmitting and eiving apparatus which enabled the commander to keep in touch with either ship or land stations up to very considerable distances.

In order to meet the special conditions obtaining in the airship and to utilize to the best advantage the very limited space available, the principal components are mounted on a light teak baseboard. The propeller is of the four-bladed type and is capable of developing about three horsenver.

For emergency purposes a horizontally opposed twin cylinder petrol engine of 2% horsepower is mounted on a lightly constructed tubular steel framework which can be quickly fixed just outside the gondola. The generator that is driven from the air-screw can be quickly attached to this framework by means of wing nuts.

The aerial for this apparatus is a short length of wire fixed between the wireless cabin and one of the engine gon-dolas.

The direction finder loops are fitted diagonally round the outside of the envelope, the center of the loops coinciding with the lead-in to the wireless cabin. The loops consist of two turns of wire, spaced about nine inches apart. The loops are doped to the fabric with linen tape, forming a neat and unobtrusive but very efficient fitting.

The amplifier is provided with six type V 24 valves with resistance-transformer coupling for high frequency magnification and a type QX valve for rectification.

(Ans.) The use of house current for B batteries has been pretty well perfected but the A battery eliminator is still in the budding stage. To amplify the output of a crystal set you can use any of the accepted audio amplifiers, such as impedance, resistance or transformer coupled types. If impedance 4s used three impedatormers such as those sold by the National Company would probably prove the simplest to assemble, as the wiring is very simple. The tone quality would be excellent and the B battery could be kept down to 90 volts with satisfactory results. For resistance coupling any of the units now on the market made by such manufacturers as Electrad, etc., would prove satisfactory. If transformers are used the New Amertran DeLuxe, Rauland Lyric, Erla Concert Grand, and New Silver would be found to give good results. CNRE, Edmonton, Alta. (517 Meters)

was "The New New England."
"More intimately," said Governor Brewster, "than we yet realize the future of our country will be built about the sea. This is another of the reasons why New England with its industries and its countless ports and its recreational attractions is the land of the rising sun."

STUDENTS PRESENT PAGEANT Fashions of different peoples in different ages were shown in a costume pageant given under the auspices of the art department of Brighton High School at the school yesterday. Growing out of a study of characters in English literature it was closely linked with the regular work of the school. Supervised by Miss Marjorie Loring and Miss L. Eva Pierson, instructors, nearly 40 students took part. The prologue was given by Miss Ruth Middlemas.

What Is Stewart's Household Club Plan?

It is a plan devised expressly for the purpose of making it convenient to purchase home furnishings.

On this plan we sell at our cash price. On furniture, a first payment of ten (10) per cent is required. On floor coverings, linens, etc., a first payment of twenty (20) per cent is required. Balance may be paid over a period of months. For this service, only a nominal charge of three (3) per cent is made.

A Mozart Première

Vienna, May 3 UDWIG VON KOCHEL, who catalogued the compositions which sprang from Mezart's prolific pen, records 10 symphonies as lost. One of them has recently been found by Prof. Wilhelm Fischer, at the monastery of Lambach, Austria, in the vast archives from which several symphonies by Leopold Mozart, Wolfgang's father, have been brought to light. The most important find, however, was that of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Symphony in G major. Professor Fischer well worth rescuing from oblivion. ascribes its date to 1767, and has Here, as in the early symphony, the good reasons to substantiate his operatic tendency in Mozart maniclaim. The "new" Mozart symphony fests itself strongly, particularly in is, therefore, the work of a youth of the impressive use of the compara-11 years, and its composition virtu- tively copious brasses; there are

A Belated Première

An historical concert recently given nere under the auspices of the Institute of Musical History, under the title of "300 Years of Music," derived its importance from the belated pre-mière of this Mozart piece. Without overrating its significance, and refraining from superlatives, it may be said that this symphony is a gem of its kind. To state that it stands on its own merits and deserves admiration is the greatest tribute possible to a youthful effort. The modest coring (strings, two oboes, and two horns) probably accounts for the thinness of the first movement (Allegro maestoso), if not for its some-what weak invention. The second movement (Andante) is beautiful in its soaring string cantilena resting on sustained horn notes, and anticipates some of the finest passages of 'The Magic Flute"; and the last (Presto) movement is delightful in An early performance of this its briskness. Seekers might here hitherto unknown Mass is contemdiscover a hint of the peasants' scene from "Don Juan," with Zerlina's joyful solo song.

Only a beautiful planoforte trio by Stamitz lingers in memory, and C. Ph. E. Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor with its strongly yet discreetly applied contrapuntal workmanship and its original third movement. An interesting item was J. F. Reichardt's Rhapsody for baritone voice; the same poem supplied the words for Brahms's Rhapsody for contralto and chorus, and Reichardt proved a not unworthy prede-

Mozart's C Minor Mass

After an interval of many years, ozart's Mass in C minor has again been heard—a piece which dwells in undeserved obscurity beside the, of course, greater and more important Mozart Requiem. The history of this Mass is unique and little known. Mozart completed merely four movements (Kyrie, Gloria, Sanctus and style which was later to blossom Benedictus) and interrupted his forth in flawless beauty.

The qualities that stand out in these offerings are: Luminosity—strength—beauty. The absence of violent reds is signally pleasing though carrying well are the deep yellows and light greens both in the skies and in strong, deeper greens in the foregrounds. There are positive evidences of each subject having been studied and well constructed on the spot, at different times of day and conditions of atmosphere. One notices in Florida frequent hints of this warmth of sky in winter afternoons, but these tronical canyages show a much. of atmosphere. "The Andean Range, Quindo Pass," and "Mount Tolima, Volcano," in Colombia are in notable contrast to "Mount Chimborazo, Ecuador" and the "Encalyptus Grove at Twilight," near Caracas, Venezuela. These and a dozen others stand forth in sure testimony that the Equator has charms that need only to be seen and interpreted to us by one who loves his calling. Again here are several subjects of New England and of French landscapes and chateaux that show the painters versatility and color insight.

We see in this exhibition that strength of sound painting and sturdy character may go hand in hand with heauty of tone, oolor and hue; that clarity of vision and refinement are into compatible with the "modern

Weber's First Symphony If Mozart's Mass justifies itself, in opposition to the opinion of its author, this is equally true of another pseudo-novelty, Carl Maria von Weber's Symphony No. 1, in C major. The forthcoming Weber cen-tenary is once more attracting attention to this great romantic com poser. Only recently Dr. Konstantin Schneider, of Vienna, discovered at Salzburg the original manuscript of Weber's Great Mass, which the com-poser himself had thought to be lost. A fire destroyed Weber's early compositions, and this Mass alone apparently escaped. Thus Weber disavowed his symphony, written at the age o 20, while musical director to Duke Eugen of Württemberg, at Karlsruhe. It is true that heither this symphony, nor his second one, written shortly after, and again in C major, has survived his operas or that war-horse of pianists, the "Konzertstück." And while the beauties of the first symphony pale beside the charm and poetry of "Der Freischütz," it is still a document of genius and individuality. It com-bines much of the romantic beauty and dramatic force that Weber's operas lasting achievements, and weds them to interesting elements of exotic folk music. It is

The façade of the cube-like struc ture is adorned with 10 monumental columns of gray granite surmounted by carved Corinthian capitals. Entrance to the hall is gained through nine bronze doors of Chinese design surmounted by nine balustrades with golden ornaments, the 10 pillars of the façade serving to divide the mass of people entering the vestibule into nine streams. This vestibule is decorated with four groups of white marble goddesses of music, executed by Prof. Carl Milles, Swedish sculptor. The floor is adorned with marble mosaics, the work of Mr. seth, the artist. Between the four marble goddesses are three entrances leading to the underground cloakroom which has accommodation for 2000 coats.

For a hundred and fifty years or, for that matter, ever since the third Earl of Shaftes bury published his "Characteristics," we have been, nearly all of us, on the side of the enthusiast. We have loved him partly because he loves us and helps to keep us in a good conceit with ourselves. By the same token, we have for the same length of time disliked and suspected the critics. ... > But it must be apparent that I have not burrowed beneath Browning's clear meaning in this way either to discover a minor virtue in the Duke as in those of us, its readers, who accept Browning's interpretation of set to low a rating upon the restringent type of taste that expresses itself in negative terms. Our literary criticism, to take a clear example, is fading away on the one hand into "book reviews" and on the other into "appreciations." Almost never do we read a literary comment like Jeffrey's plump and downright "This will never do!" We have almost forgotten how to say "No," so that our "Yes" has nearly lost its meaning. One is commonly told, when he reaches this point in an argument for a vigorous criticism, that if the critic "cannot say anything good he had better say nothing," leaving all adverse judgments to be uttered by time. The error consists in thinking that time can do the work of crit-icism without the help of true critics. infallible, that no one can say more than that he likes this book and dis-likes that one, and that any implicalikes that one, and that any implica-tion of more than a private personal opinion is mere egotism. People say this because they do not understand that the true critic speaks not out of his own predilection primarily, but bases his judgment upon stand-ards of universal application and consent, standards that have been consent, standards that have been slowly and solidly built through the ages. This, we may charitably suppose, was the sure basis upon which the Duke rested his claim to good taste. And finally, we are told that judicial criticism is necessarily harsh. But this, as a dozen French critics should remind us, is not true. It may be urbane without coldness, and it may be gentle without being soft. Critics and readers alike, we must learn to be hospitable to what is new without being "too soon made glad."

Southey would doubtless have gone right on filling books of descripion about his Lodore.

No one, of course, contends that this is a great or profound poem. It is simply a captivating jeu d'es-prit, what we call a "stunt," thrown off amid his arduous labors upon the monumental "Life of Wesley." Yet hat' a commentary upon the man! And what a glimpse does it afford of his domestic life! Often he had rambled with his children from Greta Hall in Keswick along he lake, and stopped at Lodore as they exclaimed with delight over the little falls. Then, one day, they caught hold of his hand and looking up into his face with childish earnestness, they begged for-what their father himself must tell:

"How does the Water Come down at Lodore?"
My little boy ask'd me Thus, once on a time; To tell him in rhyme. Anon at the word, There first came one daughter And then came another,

Surely no tune has had more adventures than this jolly one from ancient France. In his book, "Folk songs of Many Lands," Louis Elson tells how this tune was sung some 760 years ago in Palestine by French Crusaders in honor of a brave companion. From Palestine it was carried to Egypt where it is still aung. Through many years and many changes in France the little tune remained the same, although its wordwarded and, some foolish lines about the GLISH words that came over in the Mayflower and in the thousands of ships that folher course have become icanized no less than the de-ants of the good Englishmen rought them over, yet it has led for a stanch Britisher to way to giving them a dic-habitation all their own. W. A. Craigie, co-editor of the rd English Dictionary, has come Chicago prepared to spend a num-of years here to direct the makan historical dictionary of the nglish language from the time it sached American shores to the in this country. The University of Chicago is sponsoring the dictionary, Dr. Craigie having joined the faculty of the midwest institution. Dr. Craigie is training graduate students in his method of language study, 15 students comprising his present staff. When these men and women become expert in the method laymen will be invited to join in the nation-wide study of the geneology of American speech. Dr. Craigie sets this date at the beginning of the next college year.

Simple Method

The method, as explained by the Bottish scholar, appears simple. The dictionary of the American language is not intended to be a dictionary of slang or Americanisms, but a study of the monther tongue entire as used in the younger country, including, of course, words of American origin.
Consequently, every example of asage must come from American writings. Previous American dictionaries showed strong British lean-ings, the majority of their illustra-tions coming from books written overseas, Dr. Craigie noted in an interview. Even such unquestioned Americans as Webster and the edi-tors of the Century Dictionary took their principal quotations of stand-ard use from British writers, making the American examples the extion rather than the rule. Taking down a volume of the Century Dictionary, Dr. Craigie turned to the word "toss." As filustrations he found example after example from English literature but only three quotations from American writers. Another striking instance of Amerianother striking instance of American dependence on England was evident in illustrations of the use of "throat." English, nearly all of them, Very low indeed of the examples used by these dictionary editors could qualify for Dr. Craigle's dictionary, which must be, according to his plan, "100 per cent American." Some few workers have afready to his plan, "100 per cent American."
Some few workers have already hazed the way. Professor Thornton, who published an American plossary in 1912; Dr. C. W. Ernst, riculum Growing out of the plan of rehabilitation, the following program, linking up with that of the University of Hawaii, was suggested: (1) The establishment of prizes for excellence in the Portuguese classes;

(2) endowment of a Portuguese chair at the University of Hawaii; (3) endowment for Portuguese books in the library; (4) endowment of a scholarship for Portuguese students.

Of more general nature was recommended the establishment of a Portuguese book store in Honolulu, the establishment of a Portuguese newspaper, a Portuguese honor society, and the introduction of a Portuguese language into the high school curricula.

Program Succeeding

The program has already borne some fruit. Funds have been appropriated for a Portuguese library, and upon representation by the Portuguese citizens the territorial board of education has authorized the introduction of Portuguese as a modern language into the high schools of the territory, beginning in the fall of 1926. "From the yast year's work there is already noticeable a changed at-titude in regard to Lusitanian matters, both on the part of the Portuguese themselves and their, fellow-Caucasian citizens." Professor Jones declared. "This is borne out not only by personal observation, and by statements from many people, some of whom were formerly without great interest in Lusitanian matters, but-more gratifying still-by word from dependable Portuguese. At a meeting not long ago in the interest of Portuguese literature, one young man arose and state that henceforth he would never hold his Portuguese ancestry in the background as something he was ashamed to disclose, but that he would hereafter claim his racial heritage in all pride. This is but one expression of a new attitude that can but eventually prove a more just consideration for this worthy group of American citizens."

STOCK PRICES AGAIN DISPLAY SOME STRENGTH

Favorable Trade News Helps Market Upward-Rails Are Stronger

NEW YORK, June 3 (49)-Stock prices headed upward at the opening of today's market as operations for the rise encountered little resistance. Nickel Plate and Chesapeake & Ohio were strengthened by reports that a revised merger plan would soon be ready, but other rails were sluggish. Du Pont advanced more than 2 points following yesterday's brisk rise in General Motors, while Mack Trucks gained 1½ points.

Brisk rallies in all the Van Swerlingen rail stocks were the center of interest in the early dealings, strengthening the belief that new terms were being mapped out for the consolidation plan.

Pere Marquette soared almost 5 points to a new top price above 91. Nickel Plate extended its gain to more than 2 points, and the Erie common and preferred issues all gained about a point.

Meanwhile favorable trade news in oday's market as operations for

A. Wilbur, of the Herrick Company of Cleveland, chairman of the industrial securities committee of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, in the report presented to the association at its recent May meeting and which appears in the current issue of the association's bulletin.

The report, which was adopted by the board of governors of the association, while it does not take a hard-andfast stand on the question, is unfavorable to the issuance of non-voting common stock unless abuses of the privilege can be prevented.

At the same time the report insists that non-voting stock heretofore issued should not be condemned simply because it is non-voting, but that the verdict of the market-place is the final arbiter. The board believes that the machinery of non-voting stocks came into existence for the sole purpose of perpetuating competent management.

The report touches upon six aspects of the case; ownership in the common stock equity, centralized control, considerations of public welfare, fair trial before condemnation, legislative policy and banker. control. The opinion of the board of governors is summed up as follows:

public.

All this probably means the expansion of its activities along business lines for which as an organization it may have no special aptitude nor means of securing satisfactory personnel.

Second, it is by no means certain that the courts will exercise the same measure of control in the case of a majority action of stockholders where all common stock is entitled to vote, as in the case of a majority action of stockholders where only a part of the common stock is entitled to vote.

Claims of mismanagement and negligence on the part of the controlling directors and officers and perhaps the bontrolling stockholders might be listened to by the courts with a more attentive ear in the latter case than in the former.

OILS STRONG IN LONDON MARKET

CANADIAN MARINE GAINING
MONTREAL, June 3—Canadian Government merchant marine losses last year were due to depressed world conditions, poor freight rate and high operating costs, according to Sir Henry Thornton. Despite these, operating loss for 1925 was $492.826 less than in 1924. Operating deficit was $948.053. Gross revenue for the year with May estimated—is $4,493,000, an increase of $739,500.

LONDON, June 3 (Special)—Oils were in demand today on the stock exchange, there being especially large buying of Anglo-Persian shares and Mexican Eagle stock. The market on the whole was quiet. Home rails were steady on publication of smaller traffic figures.

There was a small boom in Rhodesian mine issues. Rubber and textiles are dull. Royal Dutch was 33%, Rio Tinto 37% and Courtaulds 6%.

The gilt-edge division was strong, the recent New Zealand issue selling at a premium of 1½ per cent.

Foreign issues were quiet, with the exception of Egyptian bonds which were heavy on fears of British intervention in the present crisis in that country. country.

Responsibility Involved

First of all, domination of a corporation voting stock carries with it responsibilities of the most serious nature. Whenever a house of issue elects to retain the domination of a company's affairs, it must be prepared to accept fully the responsibility that goes with it, and to act with the impartial purpose of doing only what may be best for the company and the public.

Before concluding this report, it is important, in the opinion of your committee, to touch upon one further matter; namely, the position of non-voting common stocks which have here-tofore been issued.

Concerning this subject, it is important, in the opinion of your committee, to observe that no non-voting common stocks heretofore issued and sold to the public should be condemned simply, because they are non-voting. Their position in the market has shown the confidence or lack of confidence, as the case may be, of the investing public whose verdict must determine their worth.

From a practical viewpoint, it is probable that the more fundamental question of confidence in the undertaking and its management or those who are responsible for its management, has properly had more effect on the public mind than has the subject of voting control.

WINTER WHEAT CROP REPORT WINTER WHEAT CROP REPORT
Snow-Bartlett-Frazier June crop re port gives condition of winter wheat as $2.5, with indicated crop of 532,000,000 bushels. In, May the condition improved east of the Mississippi and declined in the West, with a net gain in prospect of 27,000,000 bushels. The present crop promise in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas is 292,000,000 bushels, compared with 273,000,000 last month. Moisture conditions are generally satisfactory.

BOSTON ELEVATED SURPLUS Trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway report for April revenue of $77,031 in excess of cost of service. Excess revenue for April a year ago was $130,637. For the 10 months of the fiscal year to April 30 the road has failed by $65,402.56 to cover the cost of service; in other words, the reserve fund, which stood intact at $1,000,000 on July 1, 1925, amounted to $934,598 on May 1.

CUSTOMS RULINGS

NEW YORK, June 3 (Special)—The United States Customs Court, in overruling protests of S. J. Nicholas, Los Augeles, finds that certain slippers with leather soles and cloth uppers were properly returned for duty under the provisions of paragraph 1405 of the tariff act of 1922, at 35 per cent ad valorem. Claim of the importer for free entry under paragraph 1607, as "shoes made wholly or in chief value of leather," is therefore denied.

Judge Fischer, in sustaining claims of H. M. Hill, Philadelphia, rules that Fourdrinier wire screens, being indispensable parts of Fourdrinier paper making machines, are correctly dutiable at the rate of 30 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 372 of the act of 1922, as parts of machines, as claimed by the importer, rather than at 35 per cent under the provisions of paragraph 318, as classified by the collector.

Denying relief to Klingenstein Bros. & Co., Judge Walte holds that certain merchandise described as "original water color paintings, not works of art." to be used as designs for textiles, was properly assessed under paragraph 1313, 1922 law, as manufacturers of paper, at 35 per cent ad valorem. In overruling the protests claiming free entry under paragraph 1704, or duty at only 20 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 1449, as works of art, the Judge points out that the record in the case at bar was insufficient to warrant the court in disturbing the collector's finding.

Rail Earnings Up—Exports Increase—Employment Shows Gains

OTTAWA, June 3 (Special)—Increasing activity in the major industries in Canada provides the basis for much confidence in the immediate future. The improvement in railway earnings, the progress in bullding construction, the extension of export trade, and the favorable crop outlood are among the many encouraging fac-

General domestic trade has shown a marked improvement during the last week. Reports from the principal buying centers in eastern and central Canada are to the effect that a change for the better in weather conditions has stimulated retail demand for seasonal commodities, and that wholesalers in numerous lines are receiving a satisfactory volume of orders in moderate amounts.

satisfactory volume of orders in moderate amounts.

As regards foreign trade, exports of Canadian merchandise in April held up well in point of value, being $60,-166,000 compared with $50,909,000 in the corresponding month of last year. Imports also rose to a total of $67,801,-000, or more than $8,000,000 over April of last year.

The latest reports from Western Canada are to the effect that wheat is showing good growth in the three Prairie Provinces. Early sown wheat in the Regina district of Saskatchewan is up three inches, while some districts in Alberta report wheat up about four inches, and seeding in all sections is nearing completion.

Wheat Crop Outlook

Nearing completion.

Wheat Crop Outlook

Commenting on the western Canada crop outlook, Grant Hall, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said: "While it is a little early in the season to prophesy on the crop situation, I consider the prospects are excellent. In fact, they are better than I have seen them for some time past at this time of the year."

Some improvement in export demand, reports of damage to Argentine wheat, and a more limited exportable surplus than was expected, induced a strong bullish market which was later forced downward by the strike situation. More recently, export demand continues disappointing and wheat prices, in some grades, reached new low levels last week. No. 1 Northern cash wheat is arcund $1.52% contrasted with an average of $1.82% for May of last year.

Production of iron and steel remains fairly steady, with mills well engaged on important work. Some reduction in operation of foundries is noted, particularly in Quebec, but the sverage rate has not fallen below 50 per cent of capacity.

The iron market seems to have found solid footing at the new low level, present prices being below those of the first of the year, and of those in effect a year ago. The quotation of $26.80 at Toronto is below the Buffalo quotation for shipment to the Canadian firms who have to pay the duty of $2.50 a ton.

Employment Increases

the four months were valued at $55,-036,460, compared with a total of $48,-306,984 for the corresponding months of 1925, an increase for this year of $6,729.476.

The weighted index number of the 25 best selling industrial and public utility common stocks on the Montreal and Toronto exchanges, computed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, rose from 162.1 in the second week of May to 164.1 for the week ending May 22

Increased Production in 1925

The Bureau of Statistics has issued a report on nonmetallic mineral output in 1925, which shows that production of manufactured nonmetallic mineral products reached a value of $115,587,316, an increase of nearly $4,500,000 over 1924, and the highest since 1920 for this group of industries.

est since 1920 for this group of industries.

Increased production was evident in nearly every industry in the group.

Production of petroleum products such as gasoline, fuel oil and lubricants amounted in value to $50,678,794, an increase of $1,300,000 over 1924; the manufacture of cement products and sand-lime brick, in terms of values, showed an increase of $1,000,000; the production of coke plants rose $750,000 above 1924.

Canadian bank clearings for the week ended May 28, as reported by the clearing house content, were generally higher than those of the corresponding period of last year. Montreal clearings were the highest in the Dominion and showed an increase or $18,592,761, or 24 per cent. The clearings at Toronto were up $3,000,000, and at Winnipeg, nearly $7,000,000.

BIG TEXAS WHEAT CROP PREDICTED

Total Output for State May Reach 30,000,000 Bushels

AMARILLO, Tex., June 3—Walter Barlow of the Great West flour mill of Amarille says wheat production of the Panhandle-South Plains region of Texas will approximate 20,000,000 bushels, compared with 5,000,000 last year.

The wheat acreage covered by the survey which he has just made is 1,-100,000 acres. In north Texas an additional 750,000 acres are planted in wheat. The total production of the State should be around 30,000,000 husbale wheat. The total production of the State should be around $0,000,000 bushels.

"I have never seen wheat in finer condition at this stage of the growing season," he said, "and I have never seen the crop more advanced. It may be that better planting—55 per cent of the fields were summer fallowed—gave the plant better rootage and caused it to advance rapidly when the March snows set in.

"We are now paying $1.50 a bushel, but that is for the old wheat. I look for the new crop to be marketed at around $1, predicated on the certainty of a very large crop for Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and New Mexico. Texas has about 1,750,000 acres in wheat, and I believe we shall get 30,000,000 bushels. Oklahoma's total will probably double that of Texas, while the Kansas production is estimated at from 175,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels.

HOLD STEADY

The Boston Edison Company's financial results for the four months of this calendar year ended April 30 have been very satisfactory, notwithstanding the rate cut which went into effect last September.

This reducton, amounting to one cent per kilowatt hour in the retail price, was estimated at the time to involve about $1,200,000 a year.

For the four months to April 30 this year the cut meant a reduction in revenue of approximately $500,000, but due to the increase in output not only was this reduction made up but gross revenues were actually half a million dollars or so in excess of corresponding four months of 1925. Furthermore, this increased volume of business was handled at no increase in expense; in fact, operating expenses were some $50,000 or $40,000 under the total for the corresponding period a year ago.

The monthly output of the Edison Company has been running anywhere from 11 per cent to 14 per cent ahead of the corresponding months a year ago, averaging perhaps 12 per cent or 13 per cent. This is exclusive of the New England Power Company takings, which show sharp monthly afture agreed upon in advance.

The new Edgar station of the Edison Company at Weymouth has come in for considerable favorable attention following its attainment of the goal for which engineers have long struggled, viz.—a kilowatt hour of electricity for a pound of coal.

Not content with this distinction the station has recently hung up a new world's record, producing a kilowatt hour from 97-100th of a pound of coal.

This performance was made possible by the use of a bolder and turbine unit system using steam at 1200 pounds pressure and exhausting into the 350 pound steam header-which supplies the main units. In effect, it superimposes a small high pressure plant on a larger normal pressure plant and the com-

The falling off in the oil business is attributed not to the reduced amount of oil produced, but rather to the added facilities for refining oil on the Pacific Coast, thus precluding movement East for refining.

Canal Transits Closely related to the traffic figures is the percentage tabulation of ships using the canal. The intercoastal using the canal. The intercoastal movement (analyzed above) is restricted to American flag ships. In the canal's total business, however, in which intercoastal trade is included, the Panama Canal Record shows that American flag ships comprise only 47.2 per cent of the total number of commercial ships transiting the canal

ber of commercial ships transiting the canal

This is a decrease from a figure of 52.3 per cent in 1924. On the basis of tons of cargo, American ships carried 53.5 per cent as compared with 56.6 per cent in 1924. Without presenting involved statistical figures, it can be said in general that British ships showed proportionate decreases, Norwegian ships showed the greatest increase for the year and ranked third. crease for the year and ranked third in percentage of vessels and traffic carried, while Japanese ships, retain-ing fifth place in the lists, showed a decrease in number and in cargoes.

American vessels, as is generally known, are not toll-exempt in passing through the Canal. In the matter of rates, however, those engaged in the intercoastal trade—which is the only class which is under discussion in the matter of charges—are not subject to matter of charges—are not subject to any public tribunal or laws. A Conference Committee, formed by about eight lines, exists but there are as many more lines which remain outside it and make such charges "as the traffic will bear."

Dollar Sale Approved

Dollar Sale Approved

The Dollar Company now owns the Admiral Oriental Mail Line "President" ships, it is safe to say. After reported sales and immediate denials, friction in the Shipping Board over the proposition, a Senate Commerce Committee resolution of protest against the sale, the deed was signed and R. Stanley Dollar returned to the Pacific Coast.

The ships include the Presidents Jackson, McKinley, Jefferson, Grant and Madison and are operated between Seattle and Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghal, Hong Kong and Manila, under the name "American Oriental Mail Line," by the Admiral Line as managing operators for the Shipping Board. The ships are of the "535" type, and of about 20,000 tons.

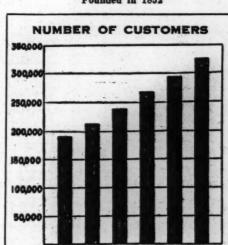

According to present plans the name will be the "Admiral Oriental Line" under which the ships were formerly operated. This ends apparently the long discussion as to the propriety of the sale of the ships to the Dollar interests. Oregon and Washington were apprehensive lest the control of this line by the Dollars, with headquarters in San Francisco, would tend to take business away from Seattle.

73% Growth in Customers

In 1920 the Associated System had 190,000 customers. Today it has over 330,000. This is the normal growth of the same properties over the entire period. The steadiness of this growth (see chart) from year to year, including 1921 with its unusual business depression, indicates the remarkable stability of the electric light and power industry.

A schedule of four trips weekly between Boston and Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, has been arranged by the Boston & Yarmouth S. Company, this season. The ships Northland and Prince George will fill the run, leaving Boston on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. The trip takes about 18 hours, ships connecting right on the dock at Yarmouth with the Dominion Atlantic train through the picturesque Land of Evangeline to Halifax. Connection also is made with the Halifax & Southwestern route along the eastern, or ocean side, of Nova Scotia to Halifax. The increased service is in response to the growing number of tourists visiting Nova Scotia.

INTERNATIONAL TREE 'AVENUE IS PLANNED

Many Nations Will Contribute to Arboreal Highway

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 1 (Special)-Canberra, the federal capital of Australia, is to be notable for, among other things, its avenues of trees from all parts of the world.

There will be many avenues. Some will be of Australian trees, including the eucalyptus, indigenous to this country, and which has made its name in others, including the United states, South Africa and southern States, South Africa and southern Europe.

This country is well furnished arboreally, and it is not indicative of any lack of suitable trees that other countries will contribute to the avenues, but rather will these offerings be manifestations of friendship. For instance, Canada will furnish an avenue of its own trees, as a gesture of Imperial oneness, and at the same time of regard for a sister dominion engaged in spadework that may reasonably be expected to have results beneficial to the world. The United States Government will, it is understood from the Consul-General for Australia, be represented in one of the Canberra avenues.

Scotland will send a Rowan tree from Forfarshire, with its native earth about it. So with other parts of the Empire, and some countries not under the Briti. I flag. It will be a great opportunity for all of them to manifest that goodwill upon which the future peace of the world.

Base of said hearing by serving a copy hereof upon the respective mayors of Boston. Ofelsea, Newton and Waltham and upon the respective mayors of Boston. Ofelsea, Newton and Waltham and upon the respective mayors of copy hereof in the Boston Forfarshire, with its native arth about it. So with other parts of the Empire, and some countries not under the Briti. I flag. It will be a great opportunity for all of them to manifest that goodwill upon which the future peace of the world.

One possible result of the sessions of the Congress of the International Women's Suffrage Alliance, in Paris, may be the advancement of the date on which the French Senate will grant equal political rights to women. This question has been on the parliamentary tapis for seven years, and only the intransigence of the Senate has prevented favorable action.

Woman Suffrage and the French Senate

The Chamber of Deputies on May 20, 1919, by the overwhelming vote of 379 to 95 favored voting rights and eligibility to office for women on the same conditions as men. In October, 1919, the Chamber adopted a resolution inviting the Government to insist that the Senate, with the least possible delay, proceed to consider the question. After the general election of 1919, the Chamber Committee on Universal Suffrage reported a new resolution inviting the Senate to take action. In January, 1921, however, the Senate by a vote of 201 to 59 declined to fix a time for consideration. It was only in November, 1922, that the upper chamber began to examine the proposition adopted by the lower house three years and five months before, but after some days of debate the Senate refused to continue the discussion. Suffrage for women was not objected to on logical grounds, but it was said that the time was not "opportune" for action.

When the matter again came before the Chamber in February, 1923, it was linked with a proposal for family voting. Several schemes to give heads of families extra votes for their minor children or their wives or to permit the father and mother to share in proportionate representation for families, have been pending for some years in the French Parliament. A family voting measure was reported to the Chamber in December, 1923, as a counter-proposal for the woman suffrage bill. The Chamber decided not to consider the scheme separately, but to debate family voting. No definite action was taken, and both woman suffrage and family voting are still on the parliamentary order of the day. Just a year ago, however, the Chamber of Deputies approved equal suffrage and eligibility to office for women in municipal and cantonal affairs, but this proposal caused no enthusiasm in the Senate. The reasons are not far to seek. Senators, chosen by electoral colleges composed in part of municipal and cantonal delegates, may have their chances of reelection influenced by the admission of women to local electorates.

The Senate, moreover, is a more conservative body than the Chamber; it is frequently a decade behind the Chamber in according its approval to social legislation or other reforms. To deal with woman suffrage before Parliament has decided to revise the unsatisfactory electoral law of 1919 is said by some objectors to be inconsistent; the electoral system should be improved before the suffrage is so vastly extended. It is possible also that the enthusiasm of the Chamber for equal rights to women has been the greater because of the certainty that the upper house would delay. The Chamber's approval could, therefore, be vicarious. Finally, French parliamentarians are not unmindful of the fact that, particularly in the United States, the admission of women to the electorate has strengthened the movement for restrictions on the traffic in alcoholic liquors. The hostility of the French Senate would doubtless be less if it had assurances that woman suffrage would never be used for temperance legislation. It is to be hoped that the sessions of the International Women's Suffrage Alliance in Paris will exert a beneficial influence on French politics in these respects.

There is assurance, gratifying it may be, that this year, as heretofore, those who turn their backs upon the colleges and universities, as well as those who step aside from the preparatory schools, all ready to face the world and its responsibilities, will not lack for advice and solicitous friendly counsel.

But it may be that those who proffer this gratuitous advice to the young, in their desire to impress the importance of the occasion upon their listeners, sometimes magthe hazards to be encountered and the liability of failure on the part of the apprentices who offer their services in doing the useful work of the world. Those who listen may, unless forewarned or forearmed, see their new task from an exaggerated or distorted perspective. Some, perhaps, will be persuaded to imagine themselves supermen or superwomen, armed and equipped to revolutionize methods and processes which they may believe have become outworn or useless. Others, if told to look, as it were, through the other end of the glass, may regard themselves merely as puppets and pawns in a great game in which they can hope to play but an insignificant part.

It may be that one distorted viewpoint is as misleading as the other. There is, happily, the possibility of gaining a somewhat clear realization of the responsibilities to be assumed and of the individual's relation to them. There is uch to be done, however, and the need of workers is great. But this has been the case always, and always there have been those who have rendered efficient and willing service. And it may be said that while in every period there have come forward those who were inclined to the belief that they possessed some peculiar fitness which would insure the accomplishment of the waiting tasks, few only have risen above the level of perfection which humanity in gen-eral has set for itself.

The processes of development through which substantial progress is gained are not perceptibly hastened by the impulse given by those who arrogate to themselves the rôle of reformers. It is sufficient, perhaps, that the level of what humanity has come to regard as perfection is gradually rising. But it can rise only as great masses advence in understanding and as great masses advance in understanding and as there is gained a clearer and better realization of man's true origin and dominion.

But there will ever be present the opportunity to aid in carrying this work forward. Those best fitted and most sincere will be able to accomplish more than those who are willing merely to fall into line and march with the procession. To many the present period is one in which they will seek their proper places and endeavor to fit themselves into the 'great scheme of events, large and small. There will be disappointments, misgivings, apparent failures, and disillusionments. These seem to come, sometimes, uninvited, unheralded, and often where they are not deserved. Fortunately, they can be avoided, or at least overcome. There is the right and proper place for all those who go forward with courage and consecration to do what their hands find to do. It is axiomatic that the rewards received are always commensurate with what we give in service and unselfish devotion to the right.

The tourist or occasional traveler who plans his itinerary to include trips by motorbus in some of the states of the American Union, is soon compelled to conclude that he has figured on an unknown, or at least an uncertain quantity. While dependable service is provided, in many sections, by lines operating between the states or from one state into another, it is discovered that efforts of legislatures to regulate intrastate traffic have tended, in some instances, to deprive the people whose rights it is sought to protect of the benefits which this new and convenient method of transportation offers. City councils, town boards and county commissioners, given the power to grant permits and the authority to withhold them when and as they see fit, seem unable, in many cases, to agree upon a common

Probably no one will be inclined to dispute the claim that the motorbus has become an established and almost indispensable means of public transportation. But it is true, likewise, that its operation must be wisely and strictly regulated. To permit the unsupervised operation of competing lines of such vehicles through streets and along highways, even if it was found possible to impose upon each a special license tax to be devoted to the construction and maintenance of roadways, would be as ill advised as would be the policy of refusing to allow them to operate under proper regulation. The important fact to be considered is that while the public has a right to regulate this traffic through its proper boards and commissions, it has also the right to insist that no unreasonable or arbitrary action deprive it of the benefits to which it is entitled.

It appears that until recently the operation of a bus line between the two largest cities in Massachusetts has been made impossible by the action of a single small city through which the vehicles would pass. Many thousands of people have thus been denied a privilege which the owners of private motor vehicles have enjoyed without hindrance. Why, it might be asked, is the welcome sign hung out for the millions of motorists and the passengers on interstate busses who pass through, only to be turned toward the wall for the short-haul tourist who is willing to pay his fare on a state bus line?

But it is quite apparent that what has been called local prejudice against established and responsible motorbus operators is gradually being broken down. This is inevitable. It is no longer possible, or at any rate reasonable, for a city or locality to isolate itself or to unreasonably restrict the use of its streets. There will be, while the determination to protect every municipality against the abuse of a common right reasonably persists, an increasing tendency to consider the welfare of the public as a whole, and thus afford the proper enjoyment of what must be regarded as a common privilege.

Bringing to the consideration of the subject his experience of years as district attorney and assistant district attorney of New York County, as well as that gained as a Supreme Court Justice, William - Harmon Black, in an address before the Bar Association of the City of New York, undertook to place upon those who deliberately commit perjury in the effort to shield from punishment those accused of capital and other crimes the responsibility to society which they voluntarily assume. There is a possibility, not at all remote, that the speaker had in thought a case then pending, and but recently decided, in which a New York theatrical producer was accused and finally convicted of perjury committed in an effort to defend himself against charges made against him in another

Upon the general subject of crimes and their punishment, Justice Black takes the view that it is a vain and futile subterfuge of the apologists for present declared tendencies to insist that because punishment does not entirely stop crime there is no good reason why punishment should be inflicted. He warns the advocates of such a policy that they are doing almost as much harm to society as the criminals they are unwisely seeking to protect. And in the same connection the speaker sought to show to the jurors who acquit those whose guilt has been convincingly proved that they are shirking their duty if they refuse to convict simply because they regard the prescribed penalty as too severe. Until the time comes when the public, as represented in Congress and in the state legislatures, mitigates the penalties now provided, the duty of the juror is that of an impartial administrator, and not that of one who should determine the nature of the punishment mer-

But it was in returning to the problem presented by the voluntary or subsidized perjurer that the speaker found what he declares to be the chief perverter of the public right. "When perjury comes into court," he remarked, "justice." tice goes out." He continued: "Perjury causes more misery, injustice, and contempt for the law than all the other crimes in the penal code because, unlike other crimes, it may pervade every trial." In view of the fact that it is nearly always difficult to prove that perjury has been committed, Justice Black urges the wisdom of providing, in cases where it can be shown that perjury has been deliberately practiced by a witness, the imposition of the extreme penalty wherever that is prescribed in the event the person accused is found guilty.

Those more or less familiar with the conduct of court trials are perhaps in a better position than those who have not witnessed such proceedings to appreciate the importance of Justice Black's observations. It is no uncommon thing to see the course of a trial in a criminal cause turned and the acquittal of the accused assured or a mistrial caused by the perjured testimony of witnesses for the defense. In two celebrated cases recently reported, alibis supported by testimony which clearly was untruthful all but turned the tide in favor of defendants whose guilt had been more than circumstantially established. In the lower courts, almost daily, judges and jurors are virtually compelled, in the absence of overwhelming testimony in rebuttal, to accept what they are almost certain are false statements designed to raise a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused. As a result, both the accused and the suspected perjurers go free, with but slight probability that those who have imposed upon the courts and upon the public will ever be called to account.

The Ascent

while the slums are prolific, with this suggestive quotation from Dean Inge:

The man who needs and spends little is the ultimate inheritor of the earth. The ruling race rules itself out; nothing fails like success. It is not difficult to sustain by examples the dismal thesis of the gloomy Dean. Within a year the Fifth Avenue palaces of two of the families long listed as topmost in New York society have passed into the ownership of a man who came penniless to the United States, bearing a name so unpronounceable to American tongues that he had to change it. The ruling race? In every land it has left its monuments but laid down its authority. The Manchus of China and the Muscovites of Russia go to join the Helenes of Greece and the ancient Romans. As for the ultimate failure of success, what of Babylon, of Thebes and of Nineveh? Read Shelley's sonnet "Ozymandias" and learn how brief and vain are human pomp

But what of it all?' Study the history of mankind from its earliest records. Has not there been a steady progress, interrupted now and then, but constantly ascending, to higher standards of humanity, of intelligence and of morals? If the ruling race ruled itself out it was succeeded by another race of rulers, and each in turn left impressed upon society the best it had

And step by step, since time began, We see the steady gain of man.

Editorial Notes

One hears quite a lot today concerning newspaper referendums, in which an "overwhelming" vote has been recorded in favor of repeal or modification of the prohibition laws of the United States, but not much concerning those in which the opposite result has been obtained. Yet such are decidedly in evidence, as, for example, in the case of the readers of the weekly Kansas City Star. According to the Executive's Magazine these voted dry about the middle of April in the proportion of thirteen drys to eight wets. And what is more, the wet vote was not uniform, because of those casting their ballots on this side of the scale some simply desired light wines and beer and some favored the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and a return to state control of the liquor problem. So many times it is the case of a noisy minority making a lot of commetion that it may seem to be a majority. But the vast majority, in many instances, when it feels itself safe, does not even trouble to record its opinion. When it does, however, thirteen to eight is not a bad ratio.

Not shoes and ships and sealing wax, but pigs and fogs and winds were, it appears, given serious consideration recently at the Geneva conference. And it is little wonder that such a fact is said to have created an "atmosphere" which aroused the belief that the delegates must get down to business. But it seems that the Dutch were not joking when they called attention to the significance, in their opinion, of these elements of war strength. Porkers and other live stock they looked upon as important features of potential power, while fogs they deemed of such a nature that they should not be slighted. Aside from all such considerations, however, and ignoring the fact that some believe that greater progress should be made than is being manifested, the fact remains that disarmament is in the air, which means that the world has taken a step forward such as it has before hardly even dared to think possible. No; pigs, and fogs, and wind cannot cloud that air to any great extent.

With the opening of the Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia, another of the world's great international expositions makes its bow. And to Americans the opening is significant in a more than ordinary way, for it carries with it, as Secretary Kellogg said, a "rededication of the Nation to American ideals, a fresh acceptance of America's burdens and a renewed gratitude for the bounty of America's blessings." The details of the marvelous displays on exhibition and of all the many incidents which go to make up such an exposition can be read elsewhere, and will be afforded plenty of space in every quarter. The hope may be expressed here, however, that this Sesquicentennial will indeed represent something that will help to heal the wounds which the world has received during the last ten or a dozen years. The War of Independence is a thing of the past. Its one hundred and fiftieth anniversary is a present reminder that the spirit of brotherliness is spreading with astonishing rapidity throughout the world.

Why the Lausanne Treaty Should Be Rejected or Radically Amended

A Letter

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: I have long valued most highly the manner in which THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR presents international news and its general attitude toward other nations. I must confess, however, to great amazement and regret over your editorial of May 19 concerning the relations of the United States with Turkey. It would indicate that you believe in carrying on our foreign affairs by recrim-ination and by a refusal to enter into regular diplomatic relations with Turkey. Even if all the accusations against Turkey were thoroughly proved, that would get us nowhere. A treaty is not for the purpose of appraising the past; it is not an indictment; it is to establish the basis for sound relations between countries. Neither does sentiment for the Armenians warrant recriminations. To promise what we cannot fulfill is worse than futile; it is criminally harmful.

The policy of those who oppose the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty may easily be seen to be nothing but chaos. And it is a matter of keen regret to one who has always admired the work of Mr. Morgenthau in Turkey to find that he apparently is quite willing, in his hostility to the Turks, to abandon entirely all the great American interests in Turkey. He does not seem to visualize the wonderful opportunity for these very interests, whether commercial, financial or philanthropic, to play a magnificent, disinterested rôle in the great work of consolidation and reconstruction in the new Republic of Turkey.

Those who favor the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty do so, in the main, because they believe that international relations, and civilization in general, may best be served by optimism, faith, confidence and a generous desire to co-operate. It is for these reasons that I have ventured to express my amazement and sorrowful regret that THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR should seem to favor a policy of distrust, recrimination and hostility toward a country with which normal diplomatic relations are so urgently required, not merely for the better protection of American interests, but for the best interests of all concerned in the Near East. PHILIP MARSHALL BROWN. Princeton, N. J.

A Reply

Dr. Brown, as a recognized leader of the advocates of the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty, and a diplomatic attaché of long standing in the Near East, is quite entitled, to be heard on this subject. It might be wished, however, that in the midst of his sorrow and amazement he had discussed the treaty rather than the Monrron's attitude concerning it. Our attitude is, in brief, that either the treaty should be rejected, or reservations should be de-manded which will assure the United States protection for its interests in Turkey, and make some provision for the protection of Christian minorities from Turkish barbarities.

The United States was never at war with Turkey. The treaty of 1830 is still in force and of legal effect. Turkish abrogation of it in 1914 was without American consent. If it is to be replaced by a new one, the United States should not be expected to surrender all the guarantees of the old. The Lausanne treaties forced upon the nations of Europe by the Turk were exacted at the point of the bayonet by a triumphant Turkey, ready to fight, and confident that the division among its adversaries made compulsory their acquiescence in its demands. The United States faces Turkey on, to say the least, a plane of equality. The treaty presented to it is a replica of those extorted from Europe by threats. It should be rejected, and a new treaty negotiated in which there shall be specific provision for the protection of our citizens, and their interests, in a country still devoid of civilized methods of jurisprudence; and for the assurance of academic and religious freedom in the educational insti-tutions in Turkey supported by American contributions. Neither of these ends is attained by the proposed treaty.

The present autocratic head of the Turkish state is the moral successor of Talaat and Enver, whose record of blood-guilt exceeds anything known to history. He has never repudiated their methods; instead, he himself practiced them as late as 1925. The Monitor has no apology to make for viewing with distrust and hostility a foreign power stained with the record of the Turk—the Kemalist Turk, with whom it is now asked that the United States should conclude a treaty which surrenders vital American-EDITOR, The Christian Science Monitor.

Westminster Abbey Gramophone Records

Hardly arrived home with my precious burden, I went straight to my gramophone and put on the first of the three new records made in Westminster Abbey. As soon as the needle was started, I left the room, allowing the door to remain open, and stood outside, listening; for it is never fair to the newer types of gramophones and records to judge them from close at hand.

The result was thrilling beyond any experience of my perhaps jaded gramophone palate—thrilling with the purest pleasure that music can give. First came the magnificent "Gloria in Excelsis" of Thomas Weelkes (fl. 1600). The rise and fall of the 200 voices of men and boys singing unaccompanied in that sacred spot were inexpressibly moving, and as the sounds died away the echo of them in the dim arches of the Abbey filled the heart with something which no canned music has ever hitherto produced.

That the actual performance, under the baton of Sydney N. Nicholson, the organist and master of the choristers, was superb, goes without saying, whether in the Weelkes or in Sir Hubert Parry's five-part motet, "Never, weatherbeaten sail," or in Pearsall's arrangement of "In Dulci Jubilo," or in the "We Bow Our Heads," from Bach's "St. Matthew" Passion (from which we are promised many further records in the near future), with the accompaniment of the Abbey organ.

But how many people have ever heard it, or can ever hear it, in the Abbey itself? How many people all over the world will hear in these three records the noble music which has been the privilege of the very few in the past?

I confess that platitudes fill my thought when I think of this; but the passing on of good news is an exciting duty, and readers of the Monron, wherever they live, will be thankful for the tidings of a new and lovely thing which they may enjoy in solitude or in company as long as they live—the authentic record of 200 perfectly trained voices singing the finest music in the precincts of Westminster Abbey.

One other word, by way of comment. England owes this great thing to America. It is in the United States that the research work has been done by which the recording of music through a microphone has become practicable. It may seem a simple thing to the layman that sounds should enter a microphone and be conveyed along miles of wire to a distant recording room where they are transferred to the wax and permanently enshrined; but the new records made by this electrical process during the last few months have varied so much in quality that even the layman has begun to recognize the delicacy of the problem involved. America did the research work.

America sent to England the famous record of the 4850 voices of its Associated Glee Clubs, the "Danse Macabre" of Saint-Saëns, the Percy Grainger records of Chopin's "B minor Sonata," and the fantastic intimacies of Jack Smith and the Revellers. America is at least six months ahead of England in the improvement of methods of

But this is a debt that England can repay and is repaying with interest. Records are being made in England today which are more than a fair return for the benefits received. In the Albert Hall, in the Queen's Hall, in Kingsway Hall and in the studios, orchestral and choral records are produced by the electrical process which astonish the producers.

The organ is at last recorded in its true setting. No doubt opera will follow, and the imagination boggles at the visions which the new process induces.

But it is primarily by such unique glories as these three records made in Westminster Abbey that England can give to the world riches which can be quarried in perfection

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Rome

The gradual improvement of the internal situation and the total elimination of party strife which characterized the first years of Fascist rule over Italy has enabled the Italian authorities to devote greater attention to social problems, which had been somewhat neglected in past years. Most favorable results have already been achieved so that a number of new measures have been devised and are now receiving full application. These have for their object the welfare of children and young boys and girls, as well as the defense of the Italian family from the wiles of propaganda appealing to individualistic and materialistic

Italy is not a prohibitionist country, nor does there seem to be any likelihood that any form of prohibition will be introduced in Italy for some years to come. A law, however, has recently been enacted strictly prohibiting the use of alcoholic drinks, wine included, in public or private schools and institutes of education for young boys and girls. A clause of this law forbids, under heavy penalties, the administration of alcoholic drinks to boys and girls under the age of fifteen and their employment in bars and wine shops. Tobacco vendors are also warned not to sell cigarettes or tobacco to youths, who will not be allowed to smoke in public places.

+ + + When the Italian Chamber of Deputies resumed its sittings to discuss the budget estimates of the present finan-cial year it presented a different aspect from that which it has presented during the past years. The tribune erected for the speakers, right in the center of the deputies' benches, has been removed from that place, as it was found that the speeches were not fully audible from all the parts of the Chamber, and reached with the greatest difficulty the press gallery. The tribune has now been placed at the right of the Speaker's chair, above the Government bench, and speeches are now more distinctly heard by both the deputies and the parliamentary correspondents. Another innovation in the aspect of the House consists in the removal of a semicircular bench, where parliamentary commissions sat during the debates on bills which they had previously examined and on which they had reported. A second bench, reserved for the under-secretaries of state, has been added behind the ministerial bench, and with a view to give greater prominence to the Prime Minister his chair has been slightly raised above those of the other Cabinet ministers.

+ + + Judging by the increasing number of tourists coming to Italy from every part of the globe, it is clear that they appreciate the many and varied attractions to foreigners that Italy offers. This year Italy has had to face two unforeseen difficulties. Owing mainly, however, to the excellent organization and the indefatigable propaganda of the principal tourist agency, the Enit, they have been successfully overcome, and it is now optimistically forecast that last year's record will be beaten this year. These two difficulties were the threatened German tourist boycott (which was in part effected) and the depreciation of the franc. During the first few months of this year the Upper Adige, or Southern Tyrol, was almost deserted by its favorite visitors. This was due not only to political reasons but to the fact that the hotel prices were excessively high. The depreciation of the franc, on the other hand, constituted a serious menace to the Italian tourist industry, but in spite of the lower cost of living in France, the number of visitors to Italy, especially from the English-speaking countries, far from diminishing, has daily in-creased, and has already exceeded the normal figure which is usually reached at this time of the year.

Professor Majuri, the superintendent of the excavations in Naples and its neighborhood, is so satisfied with the progress of the explorations in the Cave of the Sibyl at Cumæ, that he hopes to see the Sibyl's cavern reconstructed in accordance with its description by Virgil in time for the celebration of the two-thousandth anniversary of the poet's birth, which will take place in September. Three-fourths of the cave have been cleared up in the past two months. This is no small achievement, for the work of excavation is an arduous business. During the Gothic period the inhabitants of Cumæ blockaded almost all the entrances to the grotto in self-defense, and in course of time other huge masses fell down across the remaining openings, obliterating all traces and means of entrance. The names of several women connected with the mysterious sacrifices of the Sibyl have already been traced, and designs of implements used for the construction and decoration of the subterranean temple have also come to light. There is every hope that when the interior is fully formed will be discovered. explored the altar where the famous rites were once per-

An official report describing the fresh discoveries made in the Greek temples at Girgenti, in Sicily, during the winter months will soon be published. The excavations in this ancient Greek city, which was renowned for its works of art, have yielded so many treasures that it is now possible to reconstruct on paper the Temple of Zeus as it was before the city was destroyed by the Carthaginians in 406 B.C. Three more gigantic statues, twentyginians in 406 B.C. Three more gigantic statues, twenty-six feet high, have been unearthed, and the question of the number and position of the Telamones, which stood in the Temple of Zeus, the largest of all Doric temples, has been satisfactorily solved by the archæologists who supervised the excavations. Besides these statues, a bearded head of the period of Myron has also been brought to light. Another Greek temple, dedicated to Asklepios, has been entirely freed from the farm buildings which surrounded it, and it has been conjectured that its style follows that of the major temple of Zeus. Girgenti now possesses no fewer than ten Doric temples, whose condi-

follows that of the major temple of Zeus. Girgenti now possesses no fewer than ten Doric temples, whose condition is in so satisfactory a state that they may enable both students and lovers of art to get an exact idea of Greek art.

After negotiations which lasted five years between the representatives of the municipality of Viareggio, in Tuscany, and of the Dukes of Bourbon, an agreement has been reached settling the dispute over the ownership of the pineta of Viareggio, one of the finest pine forests of Italy. The pine wood, which extends for six miles from Viareggio to Torre del Lago, becomes the property of the Commune, and the villa, containing the mausoleum of the Dukes of Parma, will continue to belong to the Duchess Marie of Bourbon, daughter of Charles Bourbon, pretender to the throne of Spain. The pine forest belonged to the Commune of Viareggio until 1818, when it was taken over by Marie Louise of Austria by a granducal was taken over by Marie Louise of Austria by a grandu decree. As the property of a former enemy subject, the pine wood was taken over by the Italian Government, who finally consented to return the historic villa to its owner on condition of transferring the pine wood to the municipality of Viareggio for the sum of 3,000,000 lire.
